What I found, and what I'd do about it

Built from first-hand experience with the product: blood panel, supplement blueprint, and everything in between.

01 10 FRICTION POINTS FROM USING THE PRODUCT

#	SEVERITY	WHAT HAPPENED	WHAT SHOULD HAPPEN INSTEAD
01	CRITICAL	Signup confirmation only on WhatsApp. A 3:30am reminder with no meal prep guidance.	Email + WhatsApp from day one. Pre-test reminders at 3hr / 1hr / 15min with fasting and dinner timing guidance.
02	CRITICAL	Technician no-showed on the rescheduled day with zero communication. Only got fixed when the HR team called to follow up on the assignment.	Any rescheduling triggers an immediate update via both channels. Ops status should be visible to the user in real time.
03	CRITICAL	The product is a PDF. No dashboard, no interactivity, no urgency hierarchy.	A web dashboard that leads with at-risk markers, visualises trends over time, and feels like something worth sharing.
04	CRITICAL	The upsell sits at the very end of the PDF. By the time I got there, I had already bought the supplements myself.	Contextual upsells tied to specific findings at the moment the user reads them. That's the conversion peak.
05	MAJOR	The partner lab (Metropolis) sent me my raw results on Tuesday. Resolute sent a "results collected" notification on Wednesday.	Set the expectation at collection: "Lab sends raw results in 24hrs. Your SUPPRx blueprint takes 48hrs for AI and doctor review."
06	MAJOR	Results arrived on WhatsApp hours before email. The two channels felt disconnected.	Deliver simultaneously, or email first with a WhatsApp nudge a few minutes later.
07	MAJOR	The "doctor oversight" section is a photo grid with no evidence of who reviewed my specific results.	A named clinician note per at-risk marker. Two sentences is enough. Function Health does this and it changes how trustworthy the product feels.
08	MAJOR	The supplement tracker is a printout on page 8. There's no digital retention tool keeping users in the ecosystem.	A WhatsApp check-in bot at minimum. An in-app tracker ideally. Every US competitor has solved this.
09	MODERATE	The supplement stack leads with Spirulina for eosinophils. My Vitamin D was critically deficient and buried further down.	Order the stack by urgency. At-risk first. Users act on what they see first.

#	SEVERITY	WHAT HAPPENED	WHAT SHOULD HAPPEN INSTEAD
10	MODERATE	The shopping list links out to Amazon and third-party brands. No owned supplements, no subscription play, no ecosystem stickiness.	Even a curated monthly bundle closes the loop. Bioniq ships a personalised formula pouch. That's the retention model to study.

02 COMPETITIVE GAPS VS US LEADERS

RESULT DELIVERY (DASHBOARD)

The moment a user receives their results is the highest point of intent they will ever have. A PDF ends that moment; a dashboard extends it into action. Function Health, Bioniq, and OneTwenty all deliver results through interactive experiences with trend tracking built in.

ECOSYSTEM RETENTION

I received my results and immediately bought the supplements myself, outside the product. That is the exact revenue moment Resolute should own. Without a tracker, a retest loop, or an owned supplement play, there is nothing keeping the user inside the ecosystem after the PDF is opened.

CLINICAL TRUST

The doctor oversight section is a photo grid. Function Health attaches a named clinician note to every at-risk marker and calls users when results are critical. That one detail changes how safe and credible the product feels.

03 30 / 60 / 90 DAY PLAN

DAYS 1-30 — 30

Learn what's actually broken

- Shadow every customer touchpoint end-to-end
- Map the full B2B2C journey and log drop-off moments
- Audit 10 customer journeys to quantify friction
- Baseline metrics: report open rate, supplement conversion, retest rate
- Identify top 3 partner segments by volume and LTV

Output
Funnel audit + competitive gap matrix

DAYS 31-60 — 60

Fix the critical breaks

- Rebuild pre-test comms: multi-channel, timed correctly
- Synchronise result delivery across WhatsApp and Email
- Reorder report by urgency, at-risk markers first
- Pilot contextual in-report upsell on 2 partner cohorts
- Run first A/B tests on post-report activation messaging
- Build live dashboard: CAC, activation rate, report-to-purchase

Output
First experiment results + growth dashboard v1

DAYS 61-90 — 90

Build the retention loop

- Ship supplement tracker (WhatsApp bot as starting point)
- Design retest reminder flow tied to the 8-week protocol
- Scale the winning activation variant across all partners
- Launch retention campaign segmented by health risk profile
- Build B2B partner playbook: onboarding to expansion

Output
Partner playbook + Q3 ecosystem roadmap

04 PROBLEM FRAMEWORK

The central problem: the gap between result delivery and user action is where Resolute loses people. Closing it requires four things working together.
